- W: I'm glad that we decided to come to this conference. It's been extremely beneficial so far. I've even written down a few marketing ideas. I want to use them for some of the books our firm plans to publish this year.
 M: I agree. All the lectures on promotional strategies we heard this morning were very informative.
 W: Yeah. The organizers of this event are actually arranging another conference from April 13 to 15. We should consider attending that one as well, as it will focus on online advertising for firms like ours.

Questions 35-37 refer to the following conversation.

영국식 발음 → 호주식 발음

- W: Thank you for coming in to be interviewed for the junior contractor position at our building firm, Mr. Shore. Now that the interview is over, do you have any questions?
 M: Yes, I do. Will the job require much travel? I went on many business trips at my last company and wasn't very fond of that.
 W: Off-site training seminars will be held occasionally, but they typically take place at facilities within this city.
 M: So, I won't be traveling on a regular basis? I just want to be clear about this . . .
 W: Right. And we will give advance notice if it is necessary.
 M: Great. Actually, I'm glad that your company provides professional training, since it'll likely help me become aware of building changes.

Questions 38-40 refer to the following conversation.

영국식 발음 → 캐나다식 발음

- W: Excuse me. I'd like to ride this city bus to Fenton Street. However, I'm not sure how to properly secure my bicycle to the front of the vehicle. Could you show me how to use the bike rack?
 M: I'm very sorry, but the rack is out of order right now. The locking mechanism is jammed, so bikes can't be securely fastened to it.
 W: That's too bad. Well, how much longer will it take for another bus to get here?
 M: Buses stop at this corner every 15 minutes, so not very long. I suggest waiting for the next one. Sorry for the inconvenience.

Questions 41-43 refer to the following conversation.

호주식 발음 → 미국식 발음

- M: There's a problem with our online banking system.
 W: Yeah, I heard that some of our customers can't access their transaction records. There must be something wrong with our database software.
 M: That's right. Can you let Robert Nolan from the IT team know about this issue?
 W: I already did. He said that his team should have a solution to the problem by tomorrow morning.
 M: OK. Is Robert checking whether our new mobile application is affected as well? We need to make sure it is set to launch next Monday.
 W: Oh, I'm not sure. I'll call him back now and check.
 M: Give me an update on that as soon as possible, please.

 M: Oh, no. I purchased several sets for my apartment three weeks ago, but the curtains I got for my living room are almost five inches too short. I guess I made a mistake when measuring the window.
 W: Well, it's not all bad news. We carry another brand in the store that is made of a similar material and has an identical pattern. Here, let me show it to you.

 W: Can you elaborate on which aspects of it need to be revised?

 M2: Yeah, and I couldn't find any directions on how to use the orange cable that's provided.

M: Natalie, don't you think we should install automated payment machines in our shopping mall's parking lot?
 W: Definitely. Many visitors have complained that waiting to pay our parking attendant at the counter is very inefficient. It seems that cars are getting backed up when there are many shoppers trying to exit the parking lot at the same time.
 M: I can understand their concern. Plus, using automated machines in the lot will likely save us more money in the long run, since we wouldn't have to pay the wages of the parking attendants.
 W: Good point. Let's bring this up to our manager at the staff meeting this afternoon.

 M: Most likely, but I want to know more about the series before committing.
 W: The articles will focus on how Portland residents came to own companies. Since you're one of the city's most prominent businesspeople, our readers would be eager to learn about your life. I'm free to meet with you anytime next week.
 M: In that case, yes, I'd be happy to be interviewed. Why don't we meet up next Tuesday?

 M: Quite well. In fact, I'm contacting you to discuss my meeting with the CEO of Bower Industries. We've agreed to sign a contract.
 W: So, we're going to distribute Bower Industries' merchandise along the East Coast?

M: Yes, beginning in May.

 M: Hmm . . . That's definitely a problem. We'd better play it safe. Let's instruct our engineers to begin working to improve the design immediately.
 W: They've already been notified and will be prioritizing the task over the next few days. Nevertheless, we should push back the product's launch a week or so in order to have the flaw fixed.
 M: I think you're right. It doesn't appear as though we have any other options.

Questions 65-67 refer to the following conversation and graph.

호주식 발음 → 미국식 발음

M: Hey, Hadley. I'd like you to lead the software development team when Raoul retires in two weeks. If you accept the position, I'll tell our developers at the meeting this afternoon.
 W: Really? I'm honored that you selected me out of all the other candidates interested in the position. I'd love to take on that role. Do you know what my first assignment will be?
 M: Yes. You'll be overseeing a project updating one of our applications.
 W: Are you referring to Music Time? I know its monthly downloads dropped again.
 M: No, that application has already been dealt with. Actually, I'm talking about the one with the greatest jump in downloads since May. Its code must be revised.

Questions 68-70 refer to the following conversation and label.

영국식 발음 → 호주식 발음

 M: Can I look at the label? Hmm . . . although it contains a sizeable amount of vitamins, I'll pass. I'm fine with the amount of fat and sodium it contains, but I'm trying to avoid drinks with more than 40 grams of this other ingredient.
 W: No problem. Is there anything else you'd like? It's on me.

M: Really? Thanks! Umm . . . could you grab me a bottle of green tea, please? I'll go out and pump the gas. That way, we'll be able to leave as soon as you're finished.

Hello, Mr. James. This is Claire Washington—the new lead editor for your manuscript at Lilith Publications. I read over your latest submission this morning and found a major inconsistency. In chapter one, your main character states that she was raised on a farm, but she later mentions her childhood apartment. I was just going to tell you to simply change the apartment reference, but other key passages refer to it. You need to resolve this issue by July 9, since publication is scheduled for August 20. Please send me an updated copy as soon as possible. I don't think it'll take much time because you are familiar with the material and know what you meant to say.

I would like to take a few minutes to get everyone up to date on our latest project. As was discussed earlier this quarter, I commissioned Capital Group to conduct a market analysis on behalf of our company. Well, the results from their analysis have come back, and they are less promising than we were expecting. As it turns out, our newest board game, Tagline, did not test well with its target consumer group. Most users thought the instructions were too complicated. Moreover, many people found Tagline to be too similar to other games that are already on the market. Given the response from consumers, I have chosen to cancel all future development of Tagline and channel our resources elsewhere.

This is Claudia Jordan reporting for CBIZ, your most trusted source of business news. Earlier today, the search engine provider Connexion held a press conference to announce that it had acquired MapPro. The acquisition of the satellite mapping company will enable Connexion to include updated maps in its search results. This isn't that significant of a development, though. Most major search engines already allow their users to access this type of information. According to Connexion's president Briana Clinton, the company has several other planned uses for MapPro's technology, including a location-based social networking platform. We'll now welcome 30-year industry veteran Jonathon Starr to talk more about the acquisition and what it means for other online companies.

Good morning, and welcome to Charlottesville Chocolates, one of the largest chocolate producers in western Africa. Unlike most of our competitors, we do not simply take processed cocoa and turn it into chocolate candy. We use a unique production process that begins with our experts working closely with local farmers to select the highest-quality cocoa pods. We then roast the seeds in-house and use them to make our renowned chocolate bars that are sold all over the world. You'll see most of this process today aside from the portion that takes place in the fermentation room, which is undergoing repairs. Instead, we'll visit the seed harvesting area at that allotted time. Now, if everyone's ready, we'll begin.
